Find the courage to make the call. Take the first step toward healing. You don't have to take the journey alone.

What to Expect

I am trained to look at all the interconnected relationships—not just the individual. I value relationships and work to restore broken ones when possible, realizing that not all relationships can or should be restored.

As a committed Christian, I strive to integrate my faith and theological understanding with my psychological knowledge to best help my clients. I will engage in dialogue about matters of faith if the client desires.
